

Hello, Bylakuppe! It's so good to be home. In two days of travel the weather went from cool and damp to sunny and hot (35C/100C), and hasn't backed down. I no longer have a problem staying warm!

All the dogs are thrilled to see me, the young monks are happy to see me, and the older monks are mixed. I expect everyone to do as asked and follow through. When I am not here they get used to slacking. All-in-all it's been a delightful home-coming...and immediately back to work!

Ani is happy to be home, and Pasang is happy to have her home.

Some of the most heart-felt moments have been the dog-helping monk deciding the dogs need their own water tub, and keeping it filled...and the shower-helping monk remembering it's his day to help, and doing it. Any time a monk doesn't need to be reminded to help the dogs or the little monks, that's PROGRESS to me!

Hanging bedsheets and dress (robes) to dry.

I've thanked everyone individually, but it's time to thank everyone publically: Thuk je che! Cash donations, exceeding my wildest dreams, will be used as needed for classroom materials, sports equipment, and monk and pup meds. In-kind contributions include: stickers galore, a plethora of behavior reinforcers, reading books, and art supplies.
